Matthew L. Weiskopf is ORBA's Chief Information Officer. He is a highly-skilled technology professional with significant experience in implementing firm wide IT strategies that focus on increasing ROI, increasing security, and ensuring productivity. He provides continual oversight and guidance to the firm's IT department and is the firm's authority on daily trouble-shooting, technology education and ongoing supervision of the firm's technological operations. He researches and implements effective information technology systems, keeping the firm on the cutting edge of efficient business and accounting operations.

PROACTIVE

In everything he does, Matt relies on his knowledge, skills and talent to apply cost control approaches while getting the most value from processes and equipment without sacrificing performance or usability. He is an instinctive teacher, ready to assist with every day basic problems or the most complex issues. He continually monitors the most current information on cybersecurity, cloud, storage, networking and virtualization technology with the goal of advising on present day problems.

OUTSIDE OF THE OFFICE

Matt is a voracious reader of anything related to technology, the digital world and new gadgets and procedures. Matt enjoys discovering new restaurants. He also works out a lot and cycles a bike in his free time.
